Take public transit to an Ottawa 67's game and save

Ottawa – OC Transpo is pleased to announce that starting October 1, the Ottawa 67's will once again offer transit customers a discount on their game ticket, just in time for the season's home opener. Transit riders will get $2 off the price of admission to an Ottawa 67's game when they show their transit pass, DayPass or transfer for the same day. Customers save on gas, parking fees and their game ticket for all-around savings combined with family fun entertainment.

Families get additional savings on weekends when they travel to and from the game with an OC Transpo Family DayPass for the low price of $7.50. A family can include up to six people, with a maximum of two ages 12 or older. The DayPass must be purchased on the bus – exact change required.

Adult ticket fare on OC Transpo is $3.25 per trip; children ages 6-11 pay just $1.60 and children 5 and under ride for free.

Routes 1 and 7 provide frequent service along Bank Street to the Ottawa Civic Centre, and connect with Transitway service downtown. The O-Train connects with Route 7 at Carleton University. Free parking is also available at Transitway Park & Ride lots.

OC Transpo is committed to working with our community partners in creating a sustainable environment for the future.
